In Austria one of the census rules is that every person must produce a certificate of birth, and failure to do so is punishable by severe penalties.

The Boston Transcript maintains that "the advantage of our trade with Canada is shown by statistics of its total last year, when it exceeded by more than a million of dollars the trade between England and the Dominion."

The government of Brazil has ordered the confiscation of the property of the Countess d'Eu, the daughter of the ex-emperor, Dom Pedro. This step will bring considerable sums into the treasury of the republic, as the princess was voted great estates at the time of her marriage.

The seal for the State of Wyoming, adopted by the Legislature, is emblematic and, thinks the Boston Transcript, peculiarly felicitous. One of the figures is that of a woman, from whose uplifted arm hangs a broken chain, symbolizing the granting of political rights to Wyoming women. The motto of the State is "Equal Rights."

Cheetah hunting in Ceylon is a profitable sport. First the hunter gets a reward from the government, then he sells the skin, flesh, fat and claws for a handsome sum. The flesh is much appreciated as an article of diet, native doctors use the fat as a remedy for poison and a preventive against infectious diseases, and the claws are tied round the necks and arms of children as charms against epidemics and the evil eye.

New industries are being introduced in Chile in considerable numbers. There is now a large woolen mill at Santiago, and among other forms of manufacture recently started may be mentioned breweries, factories for the manufacture of bottles and pottery, sugar refineries, paper mills, and factories for the production of soap and candles. The milling industry is steadily expanding, there being now 700 flouring mills in the country.

In large canning establishments workmen lose much valuable time in heating and reheating their soldering irons, it being practically impossible to keep them at a temperature necessary for efficent work, the irons being either too hot or too cold. An electric soldering iron, which seems to obviate all the difficulties experienced with the old-fashioned irons has been invented. The head is made as usual, but back of it is a cylinder which contains two copper-heating cores wound with wires, which are heated from a current from the dynamo. The tool is very convenient, and it is said that its use is decidedly economical.

Says the Boston Transcript: The natural resources of the Appalachian basin, in West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, are at present attracting attention as never before. In iron, coal and timber it is regarded as the richest territory in the United States. West Virginia, as many other of the States, will make a large appropriation, that their natural wealth may properly be represented at the coming World's Fair at Chicago. But private enterprise will likewise be active. One gentleman in southern West Virginia is having cut a cube of ten feet of coking coal. Another cube of splint coal of seven feet; and another of pure cannel of five feet. And another party will send a poplar log ten feet long and ten feet in diameter. To carry this to the great fair the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company will build a special car of forty tons capacity. These various exhibits will be rafted down the Guyandotte River to the bridge of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, crossing it at its mouth, and then hoisted upon the transporting car.

A writer in the New York Sun gives an elaborate sketch of Topolobampo in Lower California, and what is being done there to make the communistic idea practicable. "He gives a much more favorable view of the colony," alleges the San Francisco Chronicle, "than has been furnished by disgusted colonists who have returned to this city, but it is to be feared that most of the statements made are derived from the official organ. The original colonists have had a hard time, but now genuine Java coffee has taken the place of the roasted corn that served for two years as the staple beverage. The 160 new arrivals who reached Topolobampo last December brought money and many valuable supplies, and the latest reports from the colony were encouraging. Whatever other failures the colony may have made it seems to have effectually solved the temperance question. Liquor is sold only in quantity to adults, and when a member abuses the use of any liquor, whether purchased or given, the name of the offender is published and every one is warned against supplying him with any intoxicant. In this way there is no bar placed upon the free use of liquors, while at the same time the person who drinks to excess finds he is absolutely cut off from intoxicants."

Onward.

Onward to the grander—
'Tis a song I love to sing,
Cheering all the weary-hearted;
Onward to some higher thing.

Onward to the golden,
To the happy and the true;
Not to fame and hoarded riches,
But some deed of good to do.

Onward to the righteous—
All who go at duty's call,
Here I write them down as heroes,
Though they battle but to fall.

Onward to the noble,
With a spirit not to yield,
With a heart for any weather,
And the truthful for a shield.

A COSTLY MISTAKE.

"You won't forget, Thomas?" said old Mr. Millingham.

"No, Uncle Bob, I won't forget."

"Because, you know," said Mr. Millingham, with a troubled countenance, "a man looks so old without any teeth. And I'm not sixty yet—not until next week."

"No—to-be-sure, Uncle Bob!"

"And that dentist promised them a week ago—ten days ago!" added the old gentleman.

"And, Thomas, if there are any choice violets and roses in market, you may send me down a box by express, you know," added Mr. Millingham, pretending to be intent on the scientific chipping of his egg-shell.

Thomas, the irreverent, burst into a great roar of laughter.

"Hello!" said he. "So you really intend to give me an aunt-in-law, do you, Uncle Bob?"

Mr. Millingham assumed a demeanor of great dignity.

"Is there anything so ridiculous in that?" said he. "Didn't I just tell you I wasn't sixty yet?"

"But, Uncle Bob, who is it?" persisted Tom Tatlock. "Do you know, I've heard some sort of a rumor of this in the village, but I simply laughed at 'em."

"Oh, you did, eh?" said Mr. Millingham, much offended. "I'm glad you are so easily amused. But isn't it ten o'clock, Thomas. If you mean to catch that ten twenty-five train, you've no time to lose."

"If I can't walk a mile and a half in twenty minutes," observed Tom, helping himself to a fresh slice of cold boiled beef, "I deserve to be cashiered. Just a drop more coffee, Uncle Bob. Really, your housekeeper does make superb coffee! Now then, where's my ulster and gripsack?

"I wonder," Mr. Tatlock pondered to himself, as he walked, with the long, swinging strides which proclaimed the practiced athlete, down toward Applegate Depot, "who it is that has woven a network around dear old Uncle Bob? Whoever it is, I hope she'll make him happy. But the idea of a frosty-haired old cove like him thinking of matrimony!"

And at the idea Thomas Tatlock laughed so heartily that he had to stop and pick up the gripsack, which escaped from his hands.

"It is too good a joke!" said he.

Just at this particular turn of the road a pretty Gothic mansion of cut stone with marble trimmings came in view. A rather mature young lady, in an extremely youthful hat garlanded with poppies, came out on the piazza, leading an asthmatic pug dog by a blue ribbon.

She waved a neatly-kidded hand toward the young man, which gesture he cordially returned.

"May I come in?" he called out.

The mature young lady coquettishly drew out a jeweled watch, and motioned toward the red top of the distant railway station.

Thomas shook his head, laughing; but he accepted the hint.

"Yes, I know," said he. "Express trains, like time and tide, wait for no man."

And waving his hat, he plunged down the steep hill, reaching the little station only in time to jump on board the train.

Thomas Tatlock was an embryo M. D., whose brand-new shingle had only just been hung out, and whose ambition was boundless.

Miss Francella Martin was no inconsiderable heiress, though not especially young, and Thomas had aspirations in that direction, although he had not as yet breathed aught of them to the uncle who had furnished him with an education and an outfit of surgical instruments and medical books.

"Time enough for that when she accepts me," said he to himself. "The governor is a jolly old soul, but he'd poke no end of fun at me if I couldn't hit it off. And it would be a comical conglomeration if we should both happen to get spliced at the same time!"

Mr. Tatlock went back to New York and counted his money. He looked tentatively at the check which good Uncle Bob had given him.

"Yes," he said to himself, "I think it will do. Those silky-jacketed King Charles fellows cost a pot of money; but she's fond of dogs, and a fellow has got to make a bold stroke once in awhile. Francie shall have the prettiest King Charles in Barker's store, and I'll follow the matter right up with a proposal. I hope Uncle Bob will be equally expeditious—ha, ha, ha!"

"I mustn't forget his flowers, the dear old chap!" said he. "Nor yet his false teeth!"

He was as good as his word. He had not been in New York six hours before he had interviewed the florist and Doctor Pulljaws. Violets and long-stemmed roses were reasonably cheap, as the snows of March were just melting under the sunshine of April, and the Easter demand was over.

Doctor Pulljaws was full of abject apologies; the new "upper and lower plate" had been unaccountably mislaid behind a box of assorted teeth which was to be sent, per steamer, to South America.

He could not possibly imagine, he said, how it had happened. He deeply regretted the inconvenience to which he had put his old friend, Mr. Millingham; and as he spoke he wrapped up the useful article in pink jeweler's wool and layers innumerable of silver paper.

"Now, then," said Doctor Tom, "I'll go and buy that dog, and then the matter'll be settled."

When he returned, a strange miracle had worked itself. Nothing short of a patient had appeared upon the scene—a gentleman with a broken leg, who had been carried in from the adjoining square, where a semi-inebriated cabman had achieved the distinction of running over him.

Doctor Tom Tatlock set the leg in the most modern style and felt a thrill of triumph. Then he remembered what time it was and rushed frantically to the express office and sent his parcels off, the curly King Charles desperately yelping behind the bars of his temporary prison-house, and the hot-house flowers breathing sweetness even through their damp cotton-wool, that almost neutralized a package of Limburger cheese that was packed directly under it.

Doctor Tom breathed a sigh of relief as he went back to his office again.

But the reader, not being a medical man, trammeled with office hours, is privileged to follow the packets to their final destination.

"Please, sir, the express agent 'ave left a box," said Hannah, Mr. Millingham's old housekeeper, holding the door one-sixteenth of an inch open—for her master had a pious horror of draughts, "Paid!"

"It's all right," said Mr. Millingham, adding, to himself, "The teeth—and high time, too; and probably the flowers, also."

"Marked 'Forward without loss of time!'" added Hannah.

"Perishable!" nodded Mr. Millingham. "I see!"

"With Mr. Tom's card tied to it," said the old servant, whose enunciation was extremely slow and distinct. "And it's barkin' and whinin' dreadful!"

"What!" shouted Mr. Millingham.

"And please, sir," went on Hannah, "if you'll please to come and unchain it yourself, for I always 'ad a 'orror o' them things hever since my heldest brother was bit by a mad dog an' came near losin' 'is life."

"Woman," said Mr. Millingham, "what are you talking of? Unchain a box of flowers? Unchain a set of false teeth?"

"Please, sir, it's a dorg!" explained Hannah.

"A—dog!"

Mr. Millingham started back. He had an inherited fear of dogs. His father and grandfather before him had hated dogs.

"It's—it's one of Thomas' hateful practical jokes," said he, mopping his forehead with a pocket handkerchief. "That boy never will learn wisdom. Ring the stable bell, Hannah. Tell Dennis to bring up a loaded revolver and shoot the brute. Really I've put up with a great deal from Thomas, but there is a limit to human endurance!"

Miss Martin's elegant villa was the next place at which the ill-omened express wagon paused to deliver goods.

The white-capped and ruffled-aproned maid came smirking in, for she was neither blind nor deaf, and had already hazarded several shrewd guesses as to the state of feeling between Miss Martin and the young doctor.

"A package from Doctor Tatlock, miss," said she. "Two packages—one little and one big. How's your toothache, miss?"

Francella Martin put down the hand-glass which she had been dolorously holding before her face.

Her front teeth were blackened with insidious decay, and one was gone, so that Miss Martin's occasional smile was not as unreservedly sweet as it might have been.

"How do you know they were from the doctor, Jane?" said Miss Francella, blushing.

"Here's his card tied to 'em, miss," said Jane, with an incipient giggle—"to both of 'em."

"Such roses!" said Miss Martin, ecstatically, as she opened the larger box—"such Neapolitan violets!"

"Do look at the other, miss!" exclaimed eager Jane. "I'll go bail it's a bracelet!"

"Well, I never!" cried Jane, stooping to recover it. "A double set of false teeth—sent to you, with his card!"

Francella burst into floods of semi-hysterical tears.

"I—I knew my teeth were defective," she wailed, "but it wasn't for him to remind me of it! Fling the odious thing out of the window, Jane. I'll never speak to him again!"

Doctor Tom Tatlock's mail was not a thing of joy to him the next day. It contained two letters, and this was their respective contents.

The first one also contained a set of false teeth, packed in cotton wool, and read:

"MR. T. TATLOCK: Sir—I regret that my teeth do not meet your approval. But when I require false ones I prefer to order them myself. May I request that henceforth your visits be discontinued?

FRANCELLA MARTIN."

The second was in Uncle Bob's handwriting.

"THOMAS: Your vulgar practical joke in sending me a dog by express is the last straw that breaks the camel's back. Henceforward I desire neither to see nor hear from you. R. MILLINGHAM."

Tom's letters of explanation were returned unopened, and the next week he heard that his uncle and Miss Martin were engaged.

He groaned deeply.

"Just my luck!" said he. "And just because of the merest little mistake."—[Saturday Night.

Shepherds on Stilts.

The Landes, the great savanna of France, which stretches from Bordeaux to Bayonne, is a region similar to the Bad Lands of our own country. Many vain attemps were made to induce trees to grow upon it. At last, one M. Bremontier conceived the idea of planting, with the pine seeds, the seeds of the common broom, whose hardy tuft should protect the tiny sapling until it could stand by itself.

The result surpassed hope; pine forests have sprung up and endured throughout the Landes; they have broken forever the power of the windstorms, and their pitch and timber are even a source of some riches to the department.

"There is one striking specialty of this district," writes Mr. Edwin Asa Dix. "This is the shepherd on stilts, the Xicanque, immortalized by Rosa Bonheur, and mentioned by many travellers.

"He is peculiar to this region. Perched on these wooden supports, at a perilous height above the ground, he stalks gravely over the landscape, enabled to behold an horizon of triple range, and to outstride the fleetest of his vagrant flock. When so inclined, he is quite able, it is said, to execute a pas seul, or even a jig, with every appropriate flourish of his timber limbs, and with surprising grace and abandon.

"His stilts are strapped to the thighs, not the knees, for greater freedom, and he mounts from his cabin roof in the early morning, and lives in the air throughout the day. A third stilt forms his seat, and makes of his silhouette a ludicrous and majestic tripod.

"This genius's chief amusement is smartlingly domestic; it is knitting stockings, and engaged in this peaceful art, he sits with dignity and whiles away the hours. How he manœuvres when he accidently drops a needle, I have not been able to learn.

"A dignitary of Bordeaux arranged a fete and procession in the Landes on one occasion. Triumphal arches were erected, hung with flowers and garlands, and the feature of the parade was a sedate platoon of these heron-like shepherds, dressed in skins, decked with white hoods and mantles, preceeded by a band of music, and stalkding by fours imposingly down the line of march."—[Youth's Companion.

Cantilever Bridge.

The word cantilever is variously derived from cant, an external angle and lever. The principle of a cantilever bridge is this: Take two seesaws and place them in a line, so that the ends of the two balanced boards shall be some distance apart; weight the outer ends, and lay a board between the inner ends. Now, if you have anchored the inner ends securely, you have a crude cantilever bridge. The piers of the bridge need not be directly under the centre of the seesaw boards or cantilevers; they may be more or less under the ends of the cantilevers. The new Niagara bridge is a fair example of a cantilever bridge; the new Forth bridge is a perfect example, because its cantilevers are accurately placed.—[New York Dispatch.

First Public Mention of the Gold Discovery.

In the spring of 1848 San Francisco, a village of about seven hundred inhabitants, had two newspapers, the Californian and the California Star, both weeklies. The printed mention of the gold discovery was a short paragraph in the former, under date of the 15th of March, stating that a gold mine had been found at Sutter's Mill, and that a package of the metal worth thirty dollars had been received at New Helvetia. Five weeks later the Star announced that its editor, E. C. Kemble, was about to take a trip into the country, and on his return would report his observations. He went to Coloma and either saw nothing or understood nothing of what he saw, for he preserved absolute silence in his paper about his trip. On the 20th of May, after a number of men had left San Francisco for the mines, he came out with the opinion that the mines were a "sham," and that the people who had gone to them were "superlatively silly." The increasing production of the mines soon overwhelmed the doubters; and before the middle of June the whole territory resounded with the cry of "gold! gold!! gold!!!" as it was printed in one of the local newspapers. Nearly all the men hurried off to the mines. Workshops, stores, dwellings, wives, and even fields of ripe grain, were left for a time to take care of themselves.—[Century.

The Opium Habit in China.

In conversing with a Japanese gentleman recently I obtained some interesting and truly Oriental inside information regarding the prevalence of the opium habit in China, in which country my informant resided for some years. He says that at home the lower classes, corresponding to our Clestical indwellers, are not, as a rule, addicted to the insidious habit. Opium smoking is, in fact, much above the average of their purses, but the mercantile and upper classes are, with some honorable exceptions, given up to "hitting the pipe." The very officials who promulgate edicts forbidding the people to use the drug are themselves, in most cases, victims of the habit, and the house of a wealthy Chinaman is pretty apt to contain a special room fitted up in gorgeous style and provided with a paraphernalia necessary for the enjoyment of opium smoking.—[New York Sun.

A Novel Ferry Boat.

An immense ferryboat to be run by a propeller at either end is lying at a Philadelphia (Penn.) wharf, almost ready to proceed by sea to New York harbor, where she is to be used for freight and passenger service by the New York, Lake Erie and Western railroad. She is the largest ferry boat for such service ever built, being 215 feet long, 38 feet beam, or 62 feet over guards, and 16 feet depth of hold. All her complicated machinery is below deck, making room for spacious cabins that are extravagantly fitted up. The feature of interest, however, is the machinery which drives two screws, one at either end of the boat. She has compound surface-condensing engines of 30 inches stroke, and her propellers are 8 feet 6 inches in diameter. The new boat will be called the Hugh McCulloch, and will be heated and steered by steam and lighted by electricity.—[Washington Star.

The Apples He "Used to Hook."

The millionaire, John H. Starin, was a poor boy. The first pair of boots he ever owned, he wore only in the village, carrying them on his shoulders while going to and fro, so as not to wear them out. He now owns a fine estate of 1400 acres in Montgomery County, New York, near his birthplace. "I bought than place," he writes, "because of the fine flavor of the apples that grew in a certain orchard where I used to hook them, when I was a bareheaded, barefooted boy in a pair of cut down trousers held on by one suspender strap. I used to say that if I ever got rich, I'd own that orchard, and now I do own it."—[New York Epoch.

The English Crown's Rich Perquisites.

The total sum that annually reverts to the crown of England by reason of the owners dying intestate without known heirs, lapsed legacies, etc., is about $500,000. The exact figure for the year 1889 was $493,995, as stated by the treasury solicitor in the return presented to Parliament last session. Of the balances in hand, a portion is from time to time handed over to the exchequer on account of "crown share of estates," and a part for grants to successful claimants.—[Philadelphia Record.

The open eye
May scan the sky,
And stray the blue
From star to star,
But eyes that close
In soft repose
Can traverse realms

By lash or lid
Can gird the ocean
With a glance;
But eyes locked tight
In sleep take flight

MASSACRE IN INDIA.

Nearly 500 British Goorkhas Slain by Hostile Tribes.

A Desperate Two Days' Battle With Rebel Assam Chiefs.

A dispatch received at Calcutta, India, from Manipur, Province of Assam, brings news of a disaster to a force of native troops there. James W. Quinton, the British Chief Commissioner of Assam, has recently been investigating some serious troubles which have occurred among the native chiefs. As a result of his investigation the Chief Commissioner was holding a durbar, or conference, with the leading men of Assam, with the view of arresting one of the prominent chiefs who had been instrumental in deposing the Rajah. The Chief Commissioner, while pursuing his inquiries into the disputes between the chiefs, occupied a camp which was garrisoned by a strong force of Goorkhas, native infantry in the British service. Suddenly this camp was attacked by a number of hostile tribes, led by their chiefs. A two days' battle, during which some desperate fighting took place, followed the onslaught of the tribesmen. The Goorkhas fought determinedly against heavy odds, and, according to the report, 470 of the Goorkhas were killed. Seven of the British officers who accompanied the Chief Commissioner, and that official himself, are reported to be missing.

The news of the massacre was brought to Kohima, on the Assam frontier, by two Goorkhas. The massacre originated in a feud between the Rajah of Manipur and a leading tribal chief. The Rajah was deposed, and appealed to the Viceroy. Mr. Quinton was sent to settle the trouble, and started from the headquarters at Shillong, escorted by the Forty-second and Forty-fourth Goorkha Light Infantry. After crossing the frontier Mr. Quinton summoned the chiefs to a durbar at Manipur, for the purpose of arresting the rebellious chief. The tribesmen, pretending to obey the summons, mustered in force, and at midnight on the day before the day on which the durbar was to be held suddenly attacked the camp of Commissioner Quinton, which lay between Kohima and Manipur. The attempt to surprise the camp failed, and the tribesmen were driven back. They returned, however, and kept up the attack and siege night and day for forty-eight hours. Finally the ammunition of the Goorkhas gave out and Commissioner Quinton was obliged to give the order to his men to save themselves as best they could. During the fight at the camp scouts were sent out to try to communicate with Shillong, but they never returned. The Manipur natives cut the telegraph wires and killed the messengers. Fugitives report that a general massacre followed the taking of the camp.

One account of the affair reports that Commissioner Quinton and his staff were prisoners. Another account says that Colonel Skene, the commander; Commissioner Quinton, with his son and daughter; Captain Boileau and six officers were killed, the natives refusing to give them quarter. The rebellious tribe is famous for cunning, cruelty and bravery.

Two native regiments stationed in Assam have already been dispatched to Manipur. The Third Bengal Infantry will also be sent to the scene. The Viceroy of India has abandoned his tour and has started for Simla. Five regiments and a mounted battery have been ordered to Manipur.

GEN. SHERMAN'S DESIGN.

The Simple Monument He Selected to Mark His Grave in St. Louis.

Work has begun on the monument which was designed by General W. T. Sherman himself to mark his grave in Calvary Cemetery, St. Louis. The monument is being made by the New England Monument Company.

A few weeks before his death General Sherman called on Mr. Canfield, of the Monument Company, and expressed his views as to a proper monument to mark his grave. A drawing was prepared, and after it was somewhat modified, according to suggestions made by the General, he accepted it, saying he would place it among his papers and leave a request for his executors to carry out the design. Shortly after the General's death his son, the Rev. P. T. Sherman, arranged with Mr. Canfield to prepare the monument.

The design, as approved by General Sherman, is here produced. The monument is to be made of what is known as fine hammered Westerly stautary granite of light color. It will be four feet eight inches by three feet, eight inches at the base and nine feet six inches high and made in three sections. It is to stand beside the granite cross which General Sherman a year ago erected to the memory of his wife. In height, material and finish the monument will, by the General's direction, correspond with the cross. There will be no ornamentation of the monument except on its front. On the top his well-known gold and silver combination badge will be represented. It consists of a gold pin, from which is suspended a ribbon in the national colors. The ribbon supports an arrow from which a triangle is suspended. To the triangle a gold shield is attached with an oval wreath. On the centre of the shield is a star with a cartridge box engraved on its center. The arrow, triangle, shield, star, cartridge box and acorn are each the emblem of one of the army corps with which General Sherman was associated during the war.

Below the badge are two furled flags, one the headquarters banner of the General of the army and the other the regulation national flag. It is a reproduction of the two flags as they stood in the General's late residence in Seventy-first street, New York. Below the flags in addition to the modest inscription given there will be added a simple record of his birth and death.

WONDERFUL COUNTERFEIT.

The Two-Dollar Silver Certificate Duplicated Even to the Paper.

A sensation has been caused at the United States Treasury Department at Washington by the discovery of a counterfeit $2 silver certificate so nearly perfect in all its parts as to be almost impossible of detection.

Heretofore all counterfeits of our paper currency have been readily detected by the failure to imitate the distinctive character of the paper on which Government notes are printed, which is so arranged that each part of it forming a complete note contains a solid silk thread running through it lengthwise. This paper is, for the first time, almost perfectly imitated in the counterfeit just discovered.

So far as is now known it has been used only in counterfeiting the $2 silver certificate of the series of 1886. This note was designed under the supervision of Treasurer Jordan and contains on its face a vignette of General Hancock.

It is estimated now that nearly $40,000,000 worth of these notes are in circulation; and the problem before the Treasury Department is how to get them back into the Treasury and to substitute a new series without serious embarrassment, before any considerable quantity of the counterfeit notes get into circulation.

It has been practically decided to suspend the printing of the $2 silver certificate and to institute a new series of the same denomination. These will contain a vignette of Secretary Windom and will be issued as soon as the necessary plate can be engraved. It will take about two months to prepare the plates, and in the meantime the Government will exert its utmost endeavors to secure and destroy the plates and other paraphernalia used in the manufacture of the counterfeit.

NICELY BROTHERS HANGED.

Died Protesting Their Innocence After Strenuous Efforts to Escape.

David and Joseph Nicely, brothers, were hanged at Somerset at a quarter to two on a recent afternoon. They protested their innocence to the last and died game. Death resulted from strangulation.

The crime for which they were hanged was committed on the evening of February 27, 1889, and was surrounded with many mysterious circumstances which added great interest to the murder and the trial of the prisoners.

On the night in question two disguised men entered the house of Herman Umberger, a farmer, who was known to have a large sum of money in his possession, on the pretence that they were officers of the law and were looking for plunder which a Hebrew peddler had secreted somewhere in the neighborhood. Being allowed to search the house, they finally found the pocketbooks, which contained from $16,000 to $20,000, and put them in their pockets. Umberger objecting, they shot him in the presence of his wife and other members of the household.

Suspicion fell on the Nicely brothers, who lived some fifteen miles from Umberger and were well to do, from the fact that they had been seen in the neighborhood of Umberger's house. They were arrested, tried and convicted on circumstantial evidence which was deemed conclusive. Then followed an alleged confession from one Beach, who could not be found, backed by sworn testimony. This failing of its effect in a plea for a new trial, the Nicelys made two attempts to escape, but were recaptured. Being refused a pardon, they finally suffered the extreme penalty of the law—which meets with public approval.

MAJOR JAMES MCLAUGHLIN, Indian agent at Standing Rock, South Dakota, says there has been little communication between the Standing Rock Indians and those of the Rosebud and Pine Ridge agencies since the first of the year, which is an indication of peace. It is probable that the next trouble experienced will be with the Shoshones, who live just across the line in Manitoba.

THOMAS A. EDISON was at Schenectady, N. Y., the other day, where the Edison Works are located, and after examining an electric torpedo boat, dined at the hotel. As an evidence of how deeply absorbed he became at times in his thoughts, it is said he got up from the dinner table, and in passing out of the dining room commenced to sing "Sweet Violets," much to the amusement of the waiter girls and hotel guests.

A SHORT LAY SERMON.

The CAROLINIAN is not in the habit of indulging in preachments, but this week the "spirit moves" it to submit a few observations in the way of a lay sermon to an interesting class of its rural readers, the theme being An Important Side of Charity, and the text selected will be found in the 5th chapter of Timothy, 8th verse:

But if any provide not for his own and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel,

The live, progressive farmers live better and enjoy more real luxuries than any other class of citizens. But there are many—quite too many farmers who do not, And the neglect of these home luxuries and comforts is the cause of much trouble. Too many farmers are isolated, work hard, live economically, until they become sordid and penurious.

Now it is right and proper for man in the prime of life to provide for old age and decrepitude. But this is not always best accomplished by adding acre to acre. Too much of this has been and still is done. The greedy grasping for the land adjoining has frequently deprived the wife and sons and daughters of many of the luxuries and comforts of home at the critical period of their lives.

To make more money and buy more land should not be the main object of a farmer's existence. His great aim should be to live an honest, moral and useful life, and to aid in carrying forward the standard of progress. He should not only have a family, but they should be his pride, and their respectability, happiness and prosperity should ever claim attention.

The hard working man of the farm is too apt to think and manage for more land, or for more fine stock, neglecting to provide comforts and suitable luxuries and adornments in the home. And his sons and daughters, seeing and feeling that they have not such things as their associates have—that their father's home is not furnished in a suitable manner, they do not feel free to invite their associates to return social civilities. The lack of the scores of little ornamental things which adorn and make house and home attractive, enter not into his thoughts. As the result the young become dissatisfied and are ready to be led away.

After ordering their own lives aright parents should live mainly for their children. A mans glory should be his children. While he instils into them indirectly, economy, and a desire for a true knowledge to prepare them for any position in life, he should so provide for them that they will not feel humiliated in the presence of any man or woman. A young man or woman, to be able to act with propriety and to make the best appearance in the world, must feel that they are the equal of those they mingle with. They need the environments of a pleasant and attractive home; they should be furnished with proper food for the mind and they ought to be encouraged in inviting to their homes the best society in the neighborhood,

These are among the things that every farmer should provide for his household, the failure to do which makes him "worse than an infidel." There are other important things to provide for the children besides bread and meat and coarse clothing for the body. Let charity begin at home, regulated by practical good sense.

They go together—Protection and Reciprocity. The one builds up the American home market, stimulates American industry, enlarges American production, and the other furnishes the means of transportation for such products by which we are enabled to penetrate the markets of other countries.

Secretary-of-State William L. Saunders died at Raleigh on the 2nd inst. He had been in feeble health for a long time. He was editor of twelve volumes of Colonial Records; was editor of the Wilmington Journal from 1872 until 1876 when, with P. M. Hale, he founded the Raleigh Observer.

Judge Gresham hasn't a very exalted opinion of the new Illinois Senator, who is, he says, "A great man for small issues and a small man in the face of great issues."

Recent events have settled two things—the necessity of a rigid enforcement of our Immigration laws and the building of a Navy to meet any emergency.

The Secretary of the Treasury has forwarded a check for $377.836 to Governor Fowle in settlement of the Direct Tax claims of the citizens of North Carolina.

SELLING AND BUYING.

In a recent speech Hon. William McKinley paid his respects to Free Trade Mills, who is the father of the "axiom" that "you can't sell abroad unless you buy abroad," Said Mr. McKinley:

We sold abroad last year $90,000,000 more than we bought. In the last fifteen years of a revenue tariff, from 1846 to 1861, the balance of trade against us was $479,000,000. From 1876 to 1891 the balance in our favor was $2,600,000,000, which we kept at home circulating among our own people.

It is clear enough that we can sell abroad more than we buy abroad.

Confidence in the Courts is one of the most important guaranties of good order. If the habitual criminal believes that punishment is reasonably certain in case of detection, he will be slow to commit a crime, and if the "respectable citizen" feels sure of the tribunals of the law, he will be slow to take the law into his own hands.

Much is heard about "the coming great deficit" in the Treasury. It will not come. The only deficit, present or prospective, is found in the brain cavities of Democratic alarmists.

As the election in Rhode Island on the 1st inst, the Republicans were victorious, redeeming the Legislature. The pendulum is swinging back again.

Capt. Octavius Coke has been appointed Secretary of State, to succeed W. L. Saunders deceased.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, April 4 1891.

Secretary Blaine has just shown that he is about the last man in the world to be stampeded by bluster, whether the blusterer be a loud-mouthed democratic editor indulging in threats of personal or political exposure, or the king of a bankrupt European country who hopes by arousing the national pride of his subjects to make them willingly submit to further taxation, Had this fact been as well known to the king of Italy and his advisers several days ago as it is now it might have prevented the government of that country making itself the laughing stock of the civilized world, as it has done by instructing its minister to the United States to ask for his passports because the United States Government declined to interfere with the State authorities of Louisiana, now engaged in investigating matters connected with the recent lynching of eleven members of the infamous "Mafia" society at New Orleans.

When Baron Fava, the late Italian minister, called on Mr. Blaine to present his letter of recall, he, after professing the greatest admiration and personal friendship for the Secretary, began an audacious and abusive harange about the neglect of this government to take proper steps to satisfy the demands of Italy. He was quickly interruped by Mr. Blaine and informed in polite but unmistakable language that he could not proceed further, He then very quietly withdrew and is still in Washington, though no longer minister.

The attitude of the President and the cabinet in dealing with this bit of Italian bulldozing is commended on all sides; they have just gone quietly about their duties just as if nothing had occurred. It was decided as soon as the matter was laid before the Cabinet that our minister to Italy should not be recalled, unless there was something more talgible to base such action upon than the silly recall of the Italian minister to this country.

Nobody for a moment thinks that Italy wants to fight the United States—she could'nt if she was ever so anxious, for the best of reasons, she hasn't the money or credit necessary to make her really powerful navy effective on this side of the Atlantic. At first it was believed that the Italian government was only adopting this sensational method of getting rid of its minister here, and many well informed people people are still of that opinion, but Baron Fava told a personal friend, an Americanized Italian, that such was not the case, and that his government was only desirous of emphasizing its dissatisfaction with the United States Government because it would not promise to pay an indemity to the families of the Italian lynched and to guarantee that theylynchers should be properly punished—two impossibilities, even if the evidence were ever so plain that any of the lynched men were Italian subjects.

This childish action of the Italian government will not change by a hair's breadth the status of the question of the responsibility of this government. Mr. Blaine has been investigating ever since the lynching and he will continue without regard to anything that Italy may see fit to do until he is possessed of all the facts. Then he will decide. The importance of this question is not overlooked, but there is no occasion for any undue haste, and if any serious complications were expected the President would certainly not have announced the date of his departure of his Pacific Coast trip, as he has done since the recall of the Italian minister,

The President and party, which is not thought will include any ladies, will leave here Wednesday, April 15. It is not yet certain how many of the cabinet will be in the party, but Secy Tracy will go, as he is anxious to inspect the Mare Island Navy-Yard, the Union Iron Works at San Francisco, which is building several vessels for the Navy, and the new Navy Yard on Puget Sound. Secretary Rusk will also go, the rest are in doubt.

Secretary Foster has shown his good sense by declining to be drawn into a quarrel existing between members of rival labor organizations—the Knights of Labor and the Federation of Labor—employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He also declined to order any investigation upon charges that have already been investigated without result under his predecessor.

Young J. Harry Martin, Senator Vance's step son, who, while in a drunken frenzy attempted to break into the windows of the White House with the declared purpose of "doing" the President was by consent of the President allowed to forfeit $25 collateral in the police court on a charge of assault upon the officer who arrested him, although it would have been easy to have convicted him of the charge that was first entered against him—house breaking.

Prices and the Farmers.

New York Tribune.

The aggregate of all farm products which cost $100 in 1860 would cost at this time in the same market $99.79, showing a decline of only a fifth of 1 per cent. But the aggregate of all other products, less the internal taxes above specified, which would have cost $100 in 1860 would cost now only $76 42 for the same articles in the same market, a decline of $28 57 on every 100. On what the farmer sells, therefore, he is getting about as much in New York wholesale markets as he received 31 years ago, but on all the products that he buys, taken together, he is paying 24½ per cent less than he paid in 1860. It ought to be observed that the gain for the farmers in nearly all parts of the country is much greater than these figures indicate, because the cost of transportation has been greatly reduced, thus giving to him a larger share of the price obtainable in the seaboard markets for his products, and also giving to him imported and manufactured products at less advance above their cost at the seaboard. But if such has been the general result of a Protective policy, extended over a period of thirty years, have not the Protectionists some right to gratitude if "the farmer is on top?" For it is their policy which has opened mills and mines, factories and shops, employing millions of workers, and thus has enormously increased the home demand for farm products.

BETTER TIMES.

North State.

For the two fiscal years beginning July 1st, 1890, and ending June 30, 1892, it appears that Congress has made appropriations amounting to One Thousand Million Dollars. This is a great deal of money. The government receives it and the Republicans have the sagacity, the fore sight, and the nerve to pay it out instead of letting it accumulate in the Treasury.

Every dollar of this money gets back to the people. It goes to pay salaries, make internal improvemnts, construct government buildings, and in thousands of ways gets to the masses of our people. It is paid out by the Agricultural, the Treasury, the Interior, the War, the Navy, the Postoffice Departments and the Department of Justice. It gets into the pockets of the people. There is where it should go.

The democratic press now howls about the "looted treasury." What will satisfy them? Nothing that the republicans can do—that is sure. But the people will feel the effect of good times following this great national expenditure.

A Warning for the South.

Exchanne.

At the Chattanooga banquet to celebrate the manufacture of basic steel, which Mr. Grover Cleveland declined to attend, probably because he would have been obliged to eat from a tin dinner plate brought into existence by the McKinley bill, a little incident occurred which ought to be recorded. Mr. McKinley was present and made a speech, Turning to Mr. A. M. Shook, the general manager of the Southern Iron Company, he asked:

"And can you make steel permanently in Chattanooga?"

Mr. Shook replied: "We can, unless there shall be adverse legislation."

"And if there shall be adverse legislation," retorted Major McKinley with great energy and felicity, "you will know from what it will come."

In these words of the great champion of Protection is contained a warning which should be heeded by those who have the interests of the South at heart. She cannot afford to sacrifice her great industrial future to old prejudices and antiquated political ideas.

LITERARY NOTICES.

The April number of the ECLECTIC opens with a striking paper by Karl Blind on the late Dr. Schliemann from the standpoint of an intimate friend. Aristotle as a man of science is discussed by Mr. Geo. J. Romanes in a very suggestive way. Oscar Wilde's brilliant paper on "The Soul of Man under Socialism" will set many minds thinking, even though they fail to agree with this apostle of Æsthecism, Prince Malcom Khab, late Persian minister to England, has an entertaining study of civilization in his native country. Other articles are "Public Opinion and Strikes," by J. Hall Richardson; "The Advantage of Poverty," by Andrew Carnegia; "Brand" by Prof. C. H. Herford; and two good short stories, "Our Midnight Visitor" by A. Conan Doyle, and "The Portrait of Conci ta P—," by Madame E. Gerard. Many short articles, sketches and poems fill up the rest of the number and make a very interesting mass of contents.

FORTY-FOUR PICTURES FOR TEN CENTS: By actual count, there are forty-four pictures, all of them of the most interesting character, in this week's Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. The first page is a striking scene in the corridor of the Washington Pension Office. A full page is devoted to the reproduction of some beautiful amateur photografs and there are illustrations of the California Citrus Fair, Gambling at Monte Carlo, Street Beggars of New York, A Hunt Breakfast, and a Richmond street scene. Price, ten cents.

"A Son of Old Harry" is the unique title of a story by Judge Tourgee which is now appearing in the New York Ledger. It is one of those surprises which this indefatigable writer is always springing on the literary world to the confusion of the critics, who have no sooner got him fitted to a niche than he jumps down and clambers into another. Utterly defiant of iron-clad rules, by which under the claim of art they attempt to chain fiction to insignificance and vapidness, he chooses his characters wherever he sees fit. "A Son of Old Harry" is emphatically a horse story, concerned in part with the evolution of the trotter—and is most appropriately published by the sons of Robert Bonner, the veteran patron of the trotter, whose stable is the haven to which the finest of this equine type is sure to tend.

TRIGESTIA.

A Valuable Remedy for Dyspepsia.

Dyspepsia is indigestion. What constitutes indigestion? A lack of complete preparation of the food for absorption. Obviously this may be the result of derangement of any of the above mentioned processes The stomach may not supply the requisite amount of gastric juice, the pancreas may be at fault or the liver inactive, or (and perhaps most frequently) the fault may be primarily in the nervous system, which has been aptly compared to an intricate telegraph system, and the demands made through it on the secreting organs not being properly transmitted, the secretion of all of them is below the required quantity. As for medicines, for a lack of gastric juice we have a remedy in Pepsin, prepared from the digestive organs of animals, which has exactly the same action on meat fibre and albumen. As yet nothing has been discovered to duplicate the action of the pancreatic juice and bile, but sub nitrate of Bismuth certainly does in some way exert a powerful influence on intestinal digestion In addition there are such tonics as serve to elevate the condition of the nervous system.

A preparation that impresses one as being particularly valuable is the Trigestia Tablets, a non-secret preparation of Pepsin, Bismuth and Nux Vomica. The Pepsin used in this preparation is always estimated as regards its digestive power by actual assay, the Bismuth is of the best, and the Nux Vomica the purest English extract. The action of the Pepsin and Bismuth have been explained above, and it is only necessary to add that Nux Vomica is undoubte is the best tonic we possess for nervous dyspepsia. These tablets are flavored with peppermint, which, in addition to its agreeable flavor, is a corrective of flatulence. They are offered at a moderate price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, postpaid, and can be obtained of the manufacturer, A. J. Dinaen, Broadway and Barclay street, New York Cit

The North Carolinian.

Wednesday, April 8 1891.

We want weekly information from every county of the Albemarle District, of every and all-new enterprises starting or established, improvements of all kinds, everything connected with the development of this section and the upbuilding of the people. Send us short, plain statements, as often as may be. The CAROLINIAN is interested in the material advancement of this section of Eastern North Carolina, and it will gladly publish all matters of the kind indicated.

☞Keep a firm upper lip.

☞The fruit has thus far escaped,

☞Truckers report their strawberries in bloom.

☞Captain Adam Warner, of Beaufort county, has been appointed Assistant Oyster Commissioner.

☞Through the efforts of General Manager King, the railroad tariff rates on lumber have been satisfactorily adjusted.

☞March came roaring in and went out in a cold rain. There wasn't anything lamb like at the beginning nor at the ending.

☞The CAROLINIAN would again impress upon farmers to DIVERSIFY. Those who wisely do so will succeed the best this year. Mark it.

☞The managers of The Elizabeth City Fair have in contemplation several new attractions for this year. It is the determination to make it the best yet held.

☞Rev. Wm. McGhee, at one time Pastor of the Methodist Church here, died at Bethany Station, Va., on the 2nd inst, in the 70th year of his age. He was among the ablest Ministers of the Virginia Conference.

☞While the lower Sound Fisheries are doing well those further up have been losing money. The long continued rains have kept the water so muddy that the fish have not come up stream. Of course they will come later, but expenses are heavy and the season is passing.

☞While the discriminating and unrighteous legislation on the oyster question has very seriously operated against the material interests of Elizabeth City, it has not "killed the town," as some pessimistic croakers would have people elsewhere believe. Buildings, improvements and business still go on, and will do so; not as active and rapidly as the oyster industry was promoting, it is true, but the spirit and enterprise of our citizens will not 'down"—will continue progressively onward. By the time the next Legislature convenes the oyster question will have been so thoroughly investigated and so well understood that selfish demagogueism will be powerless in preventing the wiping out of the present obnoxious law and the passing of a bill that will be equitable, protecting every interest and benefiting all. So the CAROLINIAN contends that is folly to give way to despondency—there is no real occasion for it. Before two more years roll round sound, practical sense will prevail and not only will Elizabeth City be "in the swim,' and all this section be reaping a proportionate share of the benefits, but the State will be realizing a handsome revenue from a source now comparatively non-productive, and nobody will be hurt.

☞The seven survivors of the wreck of the steamer Strathairly, an account of which appeared in last week's CAROLINIAN, arrived here on the 31st ult, on the sloop "Eliza Ellen," Daily O. Neal, master. Two of them, Robert Turner, 2d officer, and Geo. Simpson, boatswain, called at the CAROLINIAN office on Wednesday and gave a graphic account of their horrible experience. They spoke in the highest terms of the efforts of the Life-Saving crew—that they acted promptly and heroically, doing all mortal men could do. It was foggy and dark, but the line shot out reached the vessel and was caught, but the men were so benumbed and exhausted that they were unable to hold and make it available.

——Turner is a native of Cardiff, South Wales. He is 33 years of age and has been following the sea for 16 years. He is the only one with a family and is a man with much intelligence. Simpson's home is North Shields, England. His age is 30. He, too, has been a sailor for 16 years. This is the third wreck he has been through; the first in the schooner "Modena," which was wrecked in Boston Bay in 1884, when of the nine members of the crew only two were saved; the second time on the bark "North Star," which was wrecked in the English Channel in 1885. He was the only one saved, 17 being lost. In reply to the question, "Will you now abandon the water?" he replied, "Oh no, I begin to feel that I have a charmed life, and then it may never happen again,'

——Both left here on their way to their foreign homes, Lieut. Failing having rendered them every possible aid in securing transportation, etc. They were profuse in their praise of him for his unwearied attention and kindness.

☞Our Washington letter this week will be read with interest.

☞The least thing on a farm, if once neglected soon grows to be the largest.

——Make your wife happy by purchasing one of Fowler & Co's nobby suits, and if you have no wife this may help you. Boys suits from $1,25 up

☞Can any man tell how much he owes the God of Nature, or how much he has paid on account?

——Miles of Straw Matting at Fowler & Co's. Seamless white at 12½ cents; seamless fancy at 18 and 25 cents. Also big bargains in other fancy mattings and carpets.

☞Corn is quoted at 76 and 78 cents at Norfolk. It has been selling here at 72 cents.

☞Reports come from the oyster section that the people are by no means satisfied with the Lucas-Mann law.

☞The attention of those interested in the Direct Tax is called to the Card of James B. Mason, in another column.

☞Judge Bryan is holding Gates county Court this week. Next week he will hold Hertford county Court at Winton.

☞Be punctual. To an active, energetic, wide-awake person there is nothing more annoying than to be made to waite.

☞The man who sits down and waits to be appreciated will find himself uncalled-for luggage when the Limited Express has gone by.

——THE FRANKLIN is the best $2.50 shoe for men in the City. For sale by Moses Weisel.

☞The farmers who have saved barnyard manure and made compost heaps will, when the crops are gathered, realize more in cash profit than those depending on commercial fertilizers.

——Fowler & Co sold 650 Straw Hats to one dealer yesterday, and they have thousands left. What will they do with so many hats?

☞When you hear evil of any one, suspend judgement. Do not decide until you have heard the man's defense. Do not run out to meet every heated whelp of malice that runs with its head down and its tongue out. The probability is that it is mad and will only bite those who attempt to entertain it.

——Choice confectionaries, Canned Goods Eggs, Plums, Peaches, &c, at Robinson & Co.

☞The old poet Burns wished that the power "to see ourselves as others see us" might be bestowed upon humanity, but if the same "others" view us critically at all times, and too often with open contempt, we may well pause and ask ourselves whether it is worth while to be embarrassed or distressed by the scrutiny of eyes afflicted with a chronic moral strabismus,

☞A subscriber, who had let his subscription expire, writes:

Because of shortness in finances, I had concluded to do without the CAROLINIAN this year, but I find that I am lost without it; and the family feel so too. So we have decided to economize in other ways and send for the paper.

Another, on forwarding his renewal, writes:

I don't mean to flatter, but I must say that the members of this household think the CAROLINIAN is growing better all the time. We take three other papers, but the CAROLINIAN is the one first read and is voted by us all the best.

——A comfortable back room, in second story of the CAROLINIAN Building, for rent. Suitable for office or bed room.

☞Every sphere in life has its good as well as its bad one. If it only has two sides it is as flat as a shingle. A many-sided character is all very well if each side is a useful one to the possessor or the public, and if seven-sided, six of them are in sight. A man of many faculties, all well cultivated, is like a farm with a variety of crops—all must be tilled and harvested, each in its proper season. When this is the case it indicates a good early training, an active mind, an industrious tendency and gives promise of a happy future. All this requires work from childhood to age and strict attention to details; but the reward is sure.

——If you want a silk dress go to Fowler & Co's. They keep a full line of Surahs in dark and evening shades, Faille, Peau de Soie, Armure and the cheapest line of China Silks to be found in Elizabeth City.

LOCAL MENTION

See advertisement of Sheriff's tax sales.—Register Culpepper reports only seven marriage licences during March, four white and three colored.—Capt. J. W. T. Smith, on corner of Poindexter and Pearl streets, continues quite ill.—Mrs P. L. Russell, the venerable mother of Mrs W. W. Griffin, died at the residence of her son Walter R Russell at Norfolk on the 31st ult, aged 76 years. Her remains were brought here for interment.—

When you have a friend, be faithful, true,
And when in need he'll stand by you.

—The man who "knows it all" would not be such a bad fellow if he only kept it to himself—Kramer Brothers & Co., are so crowded with orders that they have two mills beside their own sawing lumber for them.—Zimmerman & Co., are crushing oyster shells for paving purposes. See advertisement.—The following have been elected the Vestry of the Episcopal Church for the ensuing year: J. W. Albertson sr, J. W. Albertson jr, Frank Vaughan, W. W. Griggs, T. Selby Harney, Wm J. Griffin, D. B. Bradford, F. M. Grice and Erskin Ehringhause.—Herring are now down to 10 cents a dozen.—There were several cases in the Mayor's Court the past week.—The Versifier is constrained to remark and inquire:

The awful lies the poets sing
But and to our distress;
They calmly sing of "gentle Spring,"
But where's the gentleness?

—Our young townsman John B Grigg has returned with his degree of "M. D" from the University of Maryland, having graduated with high honors.—John M. Parker, of Baltimore, was here last week in the interest of the Nag's Head Hotel Company, of which he is President. It is stated that several improvements have been decided on.—Roe shad still command good prices, ranging from 35 to 45 cents.—Lieut. W. A. Failing has paid an official visit to Virginia Beach where the "Dictator" was wrecked.—Our Young Man says that while the Democrat may not be a man of ancestry, he is one of prominent extraction.—Nearly all of last week Kramer Brothers & Co., employed eight teams to keep up their extensive orders for fish boxes.—Who denies that there is nothing so interesting to the sons of men as the daughters of other men?—

We have this to say to a good-hearted friend
It is never, no never too late to mend.
So turn over a new once more leaf,
And soon you'll find the longed-for relief.

—When people thank God that they are not as other men are, the other men often thank God for it too.—The CAROLINIAN had a very pleasant visit on Saturday from Captain R. S. Daniels, Keeper of North River Light House. He is one of the "Old Guard" Republicans, and few men are better posted.—While it is admitted that a woman is able to pack a trunk better than a man, it can't be denied but that she needs the man to sit on the lid after she has packed it, all the same.—While most church-goers are inclined to be so over-generous as to distribute the sermon to others and take none to themselves, there is one in our town who is an exception. He attends regularly and owns up that the plain-spoken preacher hits him every time.—On Wednesday last our jolly young friend Joe P. Kramer experienced an "immersion" he hadn't prepared for. Some practical "1st of April" joker had so placed a plank over upper Poindexter creek that on stepping upon it a ducking would follow. "Joe" was a victim.—Miss Fulmer, who has been visiting her friend Miss Grace Melick, has returned to her home in Pennsylvania.—Mrs. J. C. Emmerson, of Portsmouth, is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vaughan, on Church street.—Misses Mary Griggs and Eva Pailin have gone back to school at the Norfolk College for Young Ladies.—More lumber is being manufactured here than in any other town in the State.—Our friend Thomas Meads, of Salem, called the other day and gave us some salient points. We like a man who has the courage of his convictions.—The sandwich reports that he saw a boy on East Fearing street who had just eaten three pints of peanuts. That boy may have his faults, but there was considerable in him after all.—

The months are shut that use to rail
Invective hot no more we hear;
The laborer's tin dinner pail
Is just as cheap as 'twas last year.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Royal Baking Powder

top table was given by Mrs Jennie Overton, and T. W. Watson donated a very neat and handsome pulpit.—J. M. Parker, Keeper of Wade's Point Light House, dropped in on Monday. He is making a splendid record in the service.—Mrs John C. Glover, of Norfolk, is visiting her parents Captain and Mrs Tho's H. Gard, on Pearl street.—Mr. J. Wilkins, who has been spending the winter here, left yesterday for his home at Suncook, N. H. Having made investments here, he will return in the autumn.—Matthias Munden, being the lowest bidder, $129, gets the contract for carrying the mail to and from the depot.—At the meeting of the Town Commissioners on Monday night, C. W. Overman was elected to fill the vacancy in the Second Ward made by the resignation of J. B. Flora.—Prof F S Blair, the Alliance Lecturer, will speak at the Court House to-morrow.—Rev. W. C. Vaden will deliver a lecture on next Tuesday night at the Annex of the Methodist Church. Subject, "Grit." The press speaks of it in the highest terms. Tickets 25 cents; proceeds for the benefit of the Church.—Miss Evans, of Manteo, is visiting Mrs Dr. McMullen, on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Why do you endure the agony of dyspepsia? Simmons Liver Regulator will always cure you.

"Uncle" Billy Todd, of Fayetteville, on Monday celebrated his 93 anniversary. He was deputy sheriff when the old colonial court-house, built of logs and raised on posts, stood in Independence square in that city.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters and have never handled remedies that sell as well or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. A. Wadsworth, druggist.

HUN RIOTERS KILLED.

Shot Down by Guards at the Morewood Coke Plant.

Half a Score of Striking Miners Dead and Fifty Wounded.

As the result of the starting of the Morewood coke works, in the Connellsville region of Pennsylvania, infuriated strikers on a recent morning made an attempt to destroy the property, and in a fight with the deputy sheriffs eleven men were killed and about fifty wounded.

The men, principally foreigners, had threatened to cause trouble, and the shipping of coke that day was the cause of the outbreak. All that night they held meetings, and it was at 2:30 o'clock in the morning that the mob, composed of about 300 men, made their first attack on the Standard works, one mile out of Mount Pleasant, Penn. The first move of the strikers was to cut the telephone and telegraph wires, so that no warning could be given to the guards massed at Morewood. This accomplished, the Standard men marched toward Morewood. Every man was out, having been summoned by the mob marching up and down, accompanying their yells with a discordant beating of drums.

On the hills about the works upon which the descent was to be made were more than 1000 men gathered from the Tarrs, Bessemer, Alice Donnelly and Stoner works, and when the Standard men came up the on-looking reenforcements added cries of encouragement to the din. As the signals were given all closed in, the Standard men approaching the company store, in which the windows were broken with stones and the door battered down. The deputies had been warned, however, as the Standard guards hurriedly fixed the wires and announced the movement of the mob.

Three detachments of the deputies rested on their arms—two behind fences of the company's barn and the third in the store. The latter did not fire upon the mob as it passed. By the time the barnyard was reached the strikers, with yells, began the demolition of the fences. The guards at this point were militiamen sworn in as deputy sheriffs, under command of Captain Loar of the Tenth Regiment. They had Winchesters and were drilled men. As the gates went down and the mob advanced Loar commanded the men to halt. Their answer was a volley, but none of the guards were hit.

Captain Loar brought his men to attention and the flashing of the lights from the torches of the strikers on the guns seemed to inspire the rioters with something like dread. They broke for a moment, but made a charge soon after upon the stables, the intention being to fire them.

As the Huns advanced, making little noise, the deputies remained silent. Stones were thrown through the windows of the company store, but the deputies were still immovable, although keeping their weapons with a firm hold. The column had not all passed when those in front made a dash for the company's fence. Captain Loar cried "Halt!" but not a Hun stopped. But in answer to the Captain's command there were shots from three revolvers. One bullet whizzed past Captain Loar's head, and two men standing near him each felt the lead pass their heads. The deputy sheriffs under Deputy Sheriff McConnell then came to the relief of the soldier-deputies. The Huns dashed down the road and broke for the company's stables. Another command to halt was heard; another answer to the call by pistol shots. The infuriated men kept their course toward the stables. The command was then given to fire. The strikers replied, but there were too many shots from the repeating rifles. The air was filled with bullets. How many shots were fired will probably never be known, but when the smoke cleared away and the deputies ventured near the bodies seen lying in the road it was found that seven men had fallen dead and nine was dying, while three were fatally wounded. The surviving strikers fled with remarkable rapidity, and after the firing a silence that was not broken by anything save a dog's dismal howling soon reigned. The rioters were not to be seen as the day dawned.

None of the men are naturalized and some have been in the country but a short time. The strikers declare that they had been at a meeting at Mount Pleasant, and, as a body, did not intend to harm the company's property, being on their way to their homes. The Austro-Hungarian Consul at Pittsburg, Max Schamberg, was notified at once that these men were not citizens. During a previous strike the Consul was able to pacify the strikers, and so they called upon him to endeavor to prevent further trouble. He was confined to his house with the grip and was not able to leave.

A dispatch from Scottdale, Penn., says that the dead men were carried into the company store at Morewood. The strikers demanded the bodies of the victims, but were refused, and the place was surrounded by an armed mob of 2000 men who said they would burn everything on the premises unless the dead bodies were given up.

Governor Pattison ordered the Tenth Regiment of Washington, Penn., and the Eighteenth Regiment of Pittsburg to assemble and proceed at once to the coke region. It was said that the miners were prepared to blow up the mine at Morewood. Such was the latest development in the affair.

Those in the outside world have no conception of the ferocity of the Slavs and Huns of this region in times of trouble. They know no fear when aroused, will listen to no argument or reason, and when led they will follow even to death. That the dead men were not afraid, is evidenced by the fact that not one was shot in the back.

A FREIGHT TRAIN'S PLUNGE

Thirty-Nine Cars Piled on Top of a Locomotive—Three Men Killed.

While a freight train on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad was ascending the grade from Locust Summit Station on a recent night the locomotive jumped the track near Barry Station, Penn., and rolled down the embankment, carrying with it thirty-two freight cars. Engineer Andrew Walker and Fireman John Oches, also Frank Myers, a passenger engineer, who was riding to his home at Tamaqua, were instantly killed. Conductor William E. Hoffna and Brakeman Lewis Cockert and Jacob Yemancer were injured, the former fatally. The cause of the wreck is attributed to the spreading of the rails.

MISS NORA GRAY, while crossing Ramsey Creek on the railroad bridge at Ramsey, Ill., was surprised by the approach of a train. In her fright she jumped from the bridge, which is fifty feet high, but was not seriously injured.

ITALY IS INCENSED.

Baron Fava, Minister to the United States, Recalled.

Relations Severed Because of the New Orleans Lynching.

BARON FAVA.

A new and highly sensational twist was given to the diplomatic tangle growing out of the New Orleans lynching by the announcement to the State Department by Baron Fava, the Italian Minister at Washington, of his peremptory recall by the Home Government and the consequent severance of all serious diplomatic relations between the two countries as far as the Capital is concerned.

A dispatch from Washington says: Shortly after eleven o'clock this morning Baron Fava, who has for so many years represented the Italian Government as Minister to the United States, walked into the State Department and requested an immediate audience of Secretary Blaine on business of great importance.

The Secretary directed that the Italian Minister should be shown into the private diplomatic room, where he immediately joined him. Baron Fava, with many personal expressions of regret, informed the Secretary that it was his duty to announce that he had received instructions from His Majesty King Humbert to ask through the Secretary an audience with the President in order to present his letters of recall.

In accordance with diplomatic usage Baron Fava handed to Mr. Blaine a copy of the instructions he had received from his Government. They were curt and to the point. They referred to the implied pledge held out by the Government of the United States in the dispatch sent on March 15 to the Governor of Louisiana that the President and the Governor of Louisiana would co-operate in maintaining the treaty obligations of the United States toward Italian subjects in New Orleans and in promptly bringing all offenders against the law to justice. It was then added that "as the United States Government has not given assurances that the murderers of the Italian subjects acquitted by the American magistrates and murdered in prison while under the immediate protection of the authorities of New Orleans will be brought to justice, the Italian Government has found itself under the very painful necessity of showing openly its dissatisfaction by recalling the Minister of King Humbert from a country where the Italian representative is unable to obtain justice."

Secretary Blaine, it is understood, while expressing surprise and regret at this apparently hasty action on the part of the Italian Government, inasmuch as the facts of the case were still undetermined and under investigation, promised to convey to the President the Italian Minister's request, and to ask for him an interview so that he could present to the President in person his letters of recall.

The immediate cause of offense to the Italian Government is understood to be the evasive and unsatisfactory reply of Governor Nicholls to the telegram addressed to him by the Secretary of State.

The recall of Baron Fava puts an end to any further direct communication between the representative of Italy in this country and Secretary Blaine. Hereafter the State Department will be obliged to communicate directly with the Italian Government at Rome.

Secretary Blaine had a long consultation with the President and Cabinet on the new aspect in the diplomatic negotiations with Italy.

The idea that the two nations would really go to war was scouted by everybody. The question of our available military resources and the present condition of the fleet was hardly touched upon, and the increase of the army or the concentration of navy supplies was not even suggested.

The question most seriously considered was whether we should retaliate by withdrawing Minister Albert G. Porter from Rome. The opinion of nearly every member of the Cabinet is against this. It was felt that Italy had acted hastily and would probably soon regret her action. For us to follow in her footsteps would make matters worse and would detract from the dignity of our position without in any way helping us.

Strange as it may seem, this is the first time in the history of this Government that a foreign diplomat has voluntarily demanded his passport. There have been a few cases, however, in which the passports have been returned, which practically amounts to a dismissal.

Italy Does Not Mean War.

A cable message from Premier Rudini to the Marquis Imperali, in charge of the Italian legation in Washington just received clears the situation to some extent, and, in the opinion of officials of the State Department, means that Italy virtually recedes from the warlike attitude assumed since the beginning of the controversy, and indicates her willingness to await the action of the New Orleans courts before making any further threatening demonstrations toward the United States. This message is a reply to Mr. Blaine's last note, and in it the Marquis di Rudini says that Italy has asked nothing but a prompt institution of the regular judicial proceedings against the guilty parties in New Orleans, and adds that it would have been absurd to claim punishment for the offenders without the guarantees afforded by a regular trial. The diplomatic incident, the Marquis di Rudini says, can only be considered closed when the Federal Government has declared in precise terms that the prosecutions will be commenced. In the meantime the Italian Government takes cognizance of the Federal Government's declaration acknowledging the fact that compensation is due to the families of the victims by virtue of the treaty existing between the two countries.

Premier Rudini replies to Mr. Blaine that Italy does not demand the punishment of the New Orleans lynchers before trial, but merely that the Federal Government will use its good offices to hasten the trial before the New Orleans courts.

A PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS.

Morocco and Algeria Invaded by Myriads of These Insects.

After months of anxious uncertainty there remains no room for doubt that Morocco and Algeria will again be visited by a plague of locusts. The warning first came from Mogador in November last, whence the insects were then advancing in untold myriads. A spell of cold weather checked the advance for a time, but they have now arrived on the coast at Casablanca, where they literally carpet the ground. They have even invaded the city of Morocco, climbing over the walls and infesting the houses. Famine is certain to follow their ravages, and in Morocco the wretched people will be permitted to die like dogs, as they were twelve years ago when thousands perished. Algeria can scarcely escape, for Arabs who have arrived at Figuig from a village in the Sahara say that they rode on swift dromedaries for more than sixty miles through swarms of locusts. The authorities are bestirring themselves, but the latest and most scientific measures have hitherto failed to check the awful invasion, and this year efforts will in the end have to be concentrated upon the saving of lives during the famine which must result from the universal destruction of crops and every green thing which the locust, "el djerada, the scourge of the Most High," finds on his way.

The Pathos of Ugliness.

There is a small doubt as to how a majority of women of average good looks would answer the following question: "Which would you rather be, regnant in the world of letters or art or gifted regally with a faultless beauty before which all men must thrill? It is more than likely that ninety homely women out of any hundred would in honesty prefer the power that goes with personal loveliness to that which goes with wealth, with the accident of lofty birth or with the rarest intellectual distinction. It was a shrewd observation of the late Dr. Holland that when we find a man or woman who is absolutely flawless in form and feature we usually find a fool. "For a homely—even an ugly—man," he said, "I have no pity to spare. I never saw one so ugly yet that if he had brains and heart he could not find a beautiful woman sensible enough to marry him. But for the hopelessly plain and homely sisters—'these tears!'"

There is no pathos in human life so profound and universal as this—not upon battlefields, not in the wild, vain struggle of a soul adrift, seeking its God. The ugly woman is in every village in the world, living out her little tragedy. In every worthy, womanly quality she may be likely to be the superior of her pretty sister; she is tender, she is meek, she is true. But men yield her a smug respect and turn to her sister with eyes of love. She has heart-hunger, and sometimes when she either does not possess gifts of mind or the strength to cultivate them she starves into that stolidity which appeals to one of gentle feeling as does the look of pain afloat in the eye of a faithful, wounded dog. It is worse still to see her slowly brutalized by an ingrate upon whom she has lavished a love that is next to the divine. It is love like hers, indeed, that should be the proudest of the human race—so clean it is, so enduring, so wonderful in devotion and self-sacrifice; but it is love like hers, instead, that fills the world with sorrow, fills its asylums and its graves.—New York Mercury.

Clever Mode of Detecting a Thief.

Some years ago, in one of the cavalry barracks, a man complained that several articles of his kit had been stolen. The Corporal of the room, finding that the thief could not be discovered, got a large tin mess dish and turned it upside down on the floor with the barrack-room cat underneath it. Then he ordered the gas to be turned down, and requested each man to touch the dish in turn, saying that the cat would mew when the thief touched it. As a matter of fact the cat did not mew, but the Corporal suddenly cried, "I have him!" and ordered the gas to be turned up. Then he ordered each man to show hands, and all were black except those of one man; for the Corporal had, unknown to the men, blackened the back of the dish before putting it on the ground.

Needless to say that the one man who had not cared to tempt the ordeal by touch was the thief, and search among his kit revealed the missing articles. The man begged very hard to be dealt with by a room court-martial, and was let off with two dozen lashes, administered with a baggage strap. The Corporal is still in the service, and now holds her Majesty's commission.—St. James Gazette.

Purify Your Blood

Of all seasons of the year this is most emphatically the one in which to purify your blood.

There is a certain tonic in winter air which is exhilarating and beneficial, and the loss of which when milder weather comes in the spring makes us feel dull, tired and

"Played Out."

Besides this, our close confinement indoors, breathing air charged with impurities, contaminates our blood and makes liable the appearance of unexpected diseases.

Therefore the necessity of purifying the blood, and therefore the popularity at this season of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier and strengthening medicine. If you have never taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, try it this spring.

Scrofula Sores.

"When my boy was two years old he was attacked and suffered a long time with scrofula sores. The physician at length told us to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we did. Two bottles cured him. He is now 10 years old and has not had any sign of scrofula since. We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to neighbors and friends."—MRS. E. C. CLIFTER, 8 Kidder Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have for a long time been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and believe me, I would not be without it. As a spring medicine it is invaluable."—E. A. RHODES, 130 Ontario Street, Chicago, Ill.

"It Is Invaluable."

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family for the past four years, and for a thorough blood purifier it has no superior. It is invaluable as a spring medicine; it invigorates the whole system and tones up the stomach, and since I became acquainted with Hood's Sarsaparilla I always take several bottles in the spring, and, as occasion requires, the rest of the year." L. U. GILMAN, Aurelia, Iowa.

In the Eyes.

"My little girl's eyes became so sore owing to humor in the blood, that we were afraid she would lose her eyesight and had to keep her in a dark room for six weeks. We tried everything we could think of but nothing did her any good until we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla. Her eyes at once began to get better, and now she is entirely well. We think it is a very nice medicine." E. B. GIBSON, Henniker, N. H.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring tonic, and I recommend it to all who have that tired feeling." C. PARMELEE, 349 Bridge St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Shoot the Spy

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

Infant Serpents.

As described by Dr. Walter Sibley, in his paper in the British Association on "The Incubation of Serpents' Eggs," the first sign of the process of hatching is a slit, usually V-shaped, appearing at the highest part of the egg-shell, whether the egg is placed on its side or on one end. The snout of the young reptile appears at the crack. After a time the head is protruded, and often remains out of the shell for some hours before the body and the tail are hatched. If disturbed, the head is again withdrawn into the shell. The author had seen fully-hatched young snakes return to their shells when alarmed.

The young snakes, when first hatched, are smooth and velvety to the touch, with the yellow ring (of the common English snake) beautifully marked from the first, and the eyes open; but often there is some opacity about the cornea, which disappears in the course of a few hours. They are about six inches long and weigh about eighty grains. They begin to hiss in the first few days.—New York Journal.

Funeral of the Czar's Nurse.

There was a remarkable scene in St. Petersburg the other day at the funeral of Miss Catherine Strutton, who was the nurse of the present Czar. The deceased lady was eighty-one years of age, and had been forty-six years in the service of the imperial family. In fact, she died at the Winter Palace from which the funeral procession started. The weather was very bad and the streets were full of melting snow and mud, which made the walking particularly disagreeable. But in spite of all this and the attending discomfort, it is worthy of note that none of those who were expected to be present failed to put in appearance. The White Czar himself, and the Grand Dukes Vladmir, Sergius and Paul, walked side by side behind the hearse which contained the old lady's coffin, wading knee deep in the slush to the English church. There the imperial party attended the funeral service, the Emperor sitting in the Ambassador's pew, and at the grave the English clergyman who officiated was attended by Russian choristers.—New York Press.

Disease Lurked in the Trunk.

There is a difference of opinion among medical men as to the contagious phase of diphtheria. That the disease can be communicated, even after long lapse of time, seems proven by the experience of a family at Warrens, Cal. Twelve years ago a chest was filled with books and put away while the members of the household were afflicted with diphtheria. The other day the chest was unpacked, and now all the persons who handled the books are down with the dreaded disease.—Brooklyn Citizen.
